Reds Cross Danube, Join Tito's Partisans

LONDON, Thursday, Sept. 7.—(P)—The Red army has smashed across the Danube into Yugoslavia to join with the Yugoslav Partisans, Marshall Tito's radio station broadcast early today shortly after the nightly Russian communiqué had announced capture of Turnu-Severin, on the Romanian bank of the river.

English See Light—Will Lift Blackout

Long-Darkened Streets
Of Britain To Glow
Again September 17

LONDON, Sept. 6.—(P)—The rigid blackout regulations which plunged Britain into darkness five years ago will be relaxed Sept. 17, the government announced tonight.

In addition to turning on the lights again, an act which probably will be a greater boon to morale than anything short of the end of the war itself, joyful Britons will drop many civilian defense duties they undertook in the days when Prime Minister Churchill proclaimed "we'll fight on the beaches and in the hills."

The blackout—the most depressing of all British wartime restrictions—will be relaxed almost to the vanishing point a week from Sunday. Daytime firewatching will end and night fire guard duties will cease in all Britain except London and the southern coastal areas, and compulsory drills for Britain's 2,000,000 anti-invasion home guards will end next Monday.

The Ministry of Home Security published these proclamations as the war turned a full circle. Now Germany was being invaded, and Hitler was training sharpshooters for guerrilla war on German soil.

In the stores sales of blackout drapes already had fallen off sharply and sales of flags and bunting for victory day boomed.

Many cities are ready with new lighting systems; northern Liverpool already has a "moonlight" system.

Faithful firewatchers who did heroic duty during the German air force assaults tonight toasted the promising end of the war.

HOME GUARDS MAY DRILL
The Home Guards, whose members were rushed from every walk of life with walking sticks, shotguns and even pitchforks to defend their island in May of 1940, and who became a smarmy unit formed armed force of millions, may still drill voluntarily, the War Office announced.

Under the new regulations windows must be curtained only so that objects inside the building are not distinguishable from the outside. This means ordinary peacetime curtains or blinds may be used.

Although the German air force has not visited the country in force since June 7, the day after the invasion of western France, Home Secretary Herbert Morrison cautioned the public to be ready to resume their civil defense duties in event of further attacks.

PEACE MISSIONS
Already a peace mission from Romania is waiting in Moscow and another from Finland is expected.
A dispatch from Cairo said the Russian declaration of war against Bulgaria was expected to result in a joint Bulgarian armistice with the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union.

Hungary appeared to be the only satellite firmly in the Nazi grip as Czechoslovak forces, reinforced with arms from the Allies, launched a counterattack against the Germans in the vicinity of Zilina and Vrutky, main junction line of retreat for the Nazis from Romania and Hungary in the Vah valley in Slovakia.

'Not Quite So Hot,' Is Forecaster's Promise

The "cool" wave will continue in the Atlanta area today and will hold the temperature down to a maximum of about 84 degrees, according to A. J. Knarr, forecaster at the municipal airport.
The official forecast reads: "Considerable cloudiness and not quite so hot."

The Russians did not announce a crossing into Yugoslavia, and Tito's broadcast gave no details, but the development was entirely reasonable, particularly since Moscow dispatches have said the Red army often has outrun official statements by 10 miles or more.
Tito's broadcast did not state that a juncture had yet been made between his Partisans and the Russians, but the fact that he was able to announce the Russian arrival indicated some connection already existed.

USE PARATROOPERS
The Danube is 4,000 feet wide at Turnu-Severin, but an inkling that a crossing may have been made by air was contained in a midnight Moscow dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent
Eddy Gilmore, who wrote:

"The Red army is employing large groups of paratroopers in its lightning advance westward in an operation which promises soon to link up with Tito's forces."

He added that occupation of Turnu-Severin put the Russians 100 miles from Belgrade, Yugoslav capital, and a little over 140 miles from the Hungarian frontier, "but by the time this is in print, from the way the Russians are going they will be considerably closer to both objectives."

Paired with the spectacular dash of more than 50 miles westward in a single day in Romania, the Russians gave equal or greater mention to capture of the Polish front of the Narew river fortress of Ostroleka in a hard-slogging gain of two miles through some of the heaviest German defenses.

2,000 NAZIS KILLED
This victory, extending an out-flanking movement against Warsaw and creating an ominous new threat to East Prussia, 30 miles northwest, was won after five successive strong German counterattacks were beaten back the Soviet communique said.

Two thousand Germans were killed in the counterattacks and another 300 were drowned as the Russians cleaned out the whole east bank of the Narew, the Russians said.

The twin triumphs, widely contrasting in type and location, both presaged calamity for the Germans, whose radio commentaries, apparently having written off the Balkans, took a far graver view of the offensive toward East Prussia and outflanking Warsaw.

BULGARIA IS ISOLATED Capture of Turnu-Severin, at the downstream end of the famous Danube rapids known as the "Iron Gate," promised immediate junction of Soviet forces with the Yugoslav Partisans of Marshal
Tito and threatened early completion of a line of steel clear across the top of the Balkan peninsula.

The noise was tightening for the Germans in Bulgaria, Greece, Yugoslavia and Albania.

The drive isolated Bulgaria, already crying for an armistice in the war that Russia declared on her Tuesday night, and crushed the last glimmering German hopes of making any serious stand in the Balkans.

The way lay open for Russians and Yugoslavs to prod into the Hungarian plain against the last remaining Axis satellite of any consequence.

Turnu-Severin is but 100 miles from the Yugoslav city of Nis.

AMBITIOUS? SELL SODA POP! MAKE MORE THAN CONGRESSMAN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—(P)—Earl Richardson, blind operator of a cigar and soft drink stand in a government building, told a House Labor Subcommittee today that he made $24,000 last year—$4,000 more than the pay of a congressman.

The committee is investigating the need for federal assistance to the physically handicapped.

Missing Sub Skippered By Adm. Kimmel's Son

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—(P)—Loss in action of the submarine Robalo, commanded by Lt. Cdr. Manning Marius Kimmel, son of Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, was reported by the Navy today.

The submarine, a Navy announced, was "reported lost in action" against unidentified enemy forces.

Kimmel, 31, has been on submarine duty since 1938, and holds a Silver Star medal for his part in the "sinking" of a significant amount of Japanese shipping.

He took command of the year-old Robalo and his crew of at least 65 officers and men in March, 1943—his first assignment as skipper of a submarine.

His father, Adm. Kimmel, now is awaiting court-martial in connection with the Japanese December, 1941, attack on Pearl Harbor. A Navy board of inquiry currently is studying circumstances of the attack. Adm. Kimmel at that time was commander of naval forces in the Pacific.

No information was given on where the Robalo, a 1,500-ton fleet-type submarine made her last war patrol but she is presumed to have been operating in the Pacific. Her loss raised to 28 the number of submarines lost since the war started. All but four are reported overdue from war patrols.

The loss brings to 176 the number of United States naval vessels of all types lost since December 7, 1941.

The Robalo was built by the Mantowoc Shipbuilding Company at Manitowoc, Wis., and commissioned just a year ago.

Born in Washington, D. C., Kimmel was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1935. He served aboard the battleship Mississippi from July 1935 until June 1938,
when he went to New London,
Conn., to enter the submarine service.

His wife, Mrs. Agatha Gay Kimmel, lived at University, Va. He has one brother, Lt. Cdr.
Thomas K. Kimmel now on duty at sea.

French, Belgium, Dutch To Pay for Own Relief

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—(P)—Liberated France, Belgium and Holland will pay their own way in relief work, officials of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration said here today.

They won't have to dip into the United Nations' "world community chest," it was explained, because they have foreign exchange resources which will be used to defray relief expenses according to the UNRRA agreements drawn up last winter at Atlantic City.

Norway, it is understood, is not so favorably situated, and may have to call on UNRRA for part of the money needed to relieve hunger and suffering and to rehabilitate Nazi-ravaged industries.

While UNRRA contemplates furnishing no funds for France, Belgium and Holland, it will, according to the Atlantic City agreements, act as a go-between in helping these governments to get their needs filled.

Poletti To Rule Milan

ROME, Sept. 6.—(P)—Colonel Charles Poletti prepared today to become regional commissioner of the Milan region as soon as the industrial heart of Italy near the French frontier is captured. Poletti, former governor of New York, has been commissioner of the Rome district for the Allied military government.

Patton Is Stalled Waiting Supplies

SHAFF, Thursday, Sept. 7.—(P)—The swift, Germany-bound drive of the U. S. Third Army has been stalled for almost a week by lagging supplies, but in the north, American First Army tanks in mass formations were on the move eastward toward Liege after leaping across the Meuse river and breaching the Nazi Belgian defenses before the Reich, field dispatches disclosed today.

The First Army drive was along at least a 25-mile front, and supreme headquarters indicated it was operating from three secure bridgeheads over the Meuse at Namur.

Associated Press Correspondent
Don Whitehead, with the First Army, said the Yanks had started the real battle for Germany, and that as infantry and armor pushed relentlessly toward the Nazi homeland, the rate of advance soon would bring it within range of Allied big guns.

The Americans poured across the Meuse after rounding up hordes of Germans in the Mons trap. They stormed the river banks where the Germans were waiting in a midnight thrust Tuesday, and a battle raged all day, Whitehead wrote. Some of the fighting, he said, was the hardest since the St. Lo breakthrough.

On the Americans' southern flank, supplies and necessity for regrouping stopped the Third Army's swift drive toward the German border, and reinforced Nazis taking advantage of the lull have begun their first real stand since the Allied Normandy breakthrough, other front dispatches disclosed.

A heavy battle raged in the Moselle valley invasion corridor. An American mechanized cavalry column smashed through stubborn resistance to within four miles of Metz, key city on the French side of the Siegfried line. But as the Yanks closed in on the stronghold, every yard of ground was being contested bitterly.

After the enforced halt, supplies finally have caught up with the Third Army, but the Germans, fleeing in confusion a week ago,
have had time to regroup and reorganize, front dispatches disclosed.

Wes Gallagher wrote from the front that temporarily, at least, the brunt of battle against the newly reinforced German strongpoints has been turned over to the ever-ready infantry, which must drive a wedge through which Gen. Patton's armor once again can start
German flight in motion.

The Third Army, after having sent reconnaissance patrols across the border last Sunday and into Germany itself, first met strong resistance at Jouvilly, eight miles northwest of Metz, Gallagher said.

the fatherland, met the Americans with 88's, mortars and anti-tank guns.

Great Postwar Port Sought by Savannah

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 6.—Already planning tremendous improvements to its airport so as to attract millions of dollars of new commerce to postwar Georgia, Savannah now is asking the federal government for extensive harbor and channel improvements for building up sea-going trade.

Specifically, Savannah wants a channel for sea-going vessels lengthened three miles and deepened by four feet over its present 30-mile length.

And there are prospects of a state-operated port under plans recently launched by Gov. Arnall.
Newspapermen of Atlanta and Savannah heard these plans discussed today as they cruised the Savannah river to inspect the harbor maintenance activities of United States engineers.

They looked over the work of these engineers, who play a vital role in the war by keeping open the harbors of the country so war materials may move abroad to America's troops and the Allied nations.

Lt. Col. H. C. Thomas Jr., district engineer, told newsmen that the U. S. Corps of Engineers has spent

Allies Take Chalon in Dijon Push

French Pursuing
As Nazis Flee Debacle
In Southern France

ROME, Sept. 6.—(P)—French troops pursuing German forces trying to escape from the debacle in southern France have swept through Chalon-sur-Saone and tonight were believed approaching the communications center of Dijon, 38 miles to the north.

Dijon is 110 miles north of Lyon and nearly 300 miles from the beaches where the Allied Seventh Army landed just over three weeks ago. It is less than 80 miles from the Belfort gap into southwest Germany.

Only about 60 miles separated the speeding French column from Americans of Gen. Patton's U. S.
Third Army, who last week reported at Bar-sur-Seine in their push southeastward from the Paris area.
A junction of the French-American forces would trap every German soldier remaining in southern and western France.

American troops rolling up the east bank of the Saone occupied the village of St. Germain du Plain, eight miles southeast of Chalonssur-Saone, after a brisk fight with Nazi rearguards.

Allied headquarters offered no information on the position of the main German force, which last week was reported fleeing toward Dijon.

There was no immediate official explanation of the Nazis' apparent decision to retreat through Dijon, which is well north of the main,
most direct route from Chalon-sur-Seine through the Belfort gap. The interior route, roughly paralleling the Swiss border, runs through Bea-ncon, 64 miles northeast of Challon, and Beaune-les-Dames to Belfort.

In their drive to Chalon the French swept through numerous towns, including Cluny, famed for its lace; Sennecey-le-Grand, and Le-Vallier. Their advance was only slightly opposed. American forces occupied Louhans, 21 miles southeast of Chalon, and Lons-le-Sau-nier, near by.

THIS WAS JUST TOO MUCH

Private Charges Wife Spent His Pay on Captain

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 6.—(P)—A GI private fighting in France, whose bride allegedly squandered his military pay on a captain now in the Southwest Pacific, was granted a divorce today in Jackson county circuit court with neither husband, wife, nor co-responder present.

Mrs. Beanie Selsor was there as the only witness to present for her son, Pvt. James O. Bryant, the story of his riddled marriage and some love letters from the captain to the private's bride which were described as unprintable and on the basis of which Judge Paul Burdard, a World War I veteran, granted the divorce.

Bryant's sister captured the letters from the wife after she came here from Winter Garden, Fla., to live with her mother-in-law after the captain went off to war, Pacific bound. The Bryants were married at 5 p. m., December 11, 1943, at Winter Garden and at 11 p. m. the same day Bryant was recalled to camp and left for a port of embarkation and overseas without even a farewell to his wife.

Mrs. Bryant later wrote her husband she had met the captain, then a lieutenant, and had dinner with him. The captain's letters offered in evidence today showed a sad parting some time later. He wrote: "The reason I kissed you a hundred times at the train was because I was thinking how much I love you."

"A private shouldn't be paying an allotment for a wife to spend on another bird," the soldier's lawyer said.

Three Japanese Freighters Destroyed Off Philippines

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Navy Catalina planes sank three Japanese freighters off Mindanao, southern Philippines, Monday night and Tuesday morning, MacArthur's headquarters announced today.

Liberator bombers, meanwhile, continued the relentless neutralization of the airdromes around Davao, most important port in the southern Philippines, toward which Gen. MacArthur's forces are aiming.

Simultaneously strong forces of Australian and American fighter bombers swept Vogelkop peninsula on Dutch New Guinea, hitting at Japanese positions. They did their work without encountering enemy opposition.

Navy Secretary Forrestal yesterday, in effect, warned Japan to expect hard naval blows after Germany falls, saying the fast growing American Navy would continue to expand.

Emphasis to this statement came late in the day. Pacific fleet headquarters announced widespread air raids on Japanese bases, including the first raid on the Marcus islands since May of this year.

Forrestal said emphatically the Navy will not demobilize when Hitler throws in the sponge. He said there were now 3,000,000 men in the Navy and that by next year there would be 4,000,000.

This statement, coming on the heels of the Army's demobilization plan, showed plainly that the Navy expects the next few months in the Pacific to bring heavy naval action, if and when Japan's skulking fleet comes out and fights.

The Pacific fleet announcement of air attacks on enemy bases throughout the Central and Western Pacific, may presage sea fighting in the offing. It appears certain that Halmahera, Palau and Yap islands will be seized by the Americans before General MacArthur can grab a foothold in the Philippines.

In the Marcus raid, which was conducted Sunday, an ammunition building was destroyed. Ack-ask was intense.

There were attacks also, most-

IT AIN'T OVER

Peace Talk Is Scotched By London

LONDON, Sept. 6.—(P)—No peace plea has yet been made to the United Nations by Germany, a spokesman for the British government said emphatically tonight.

He made the statement, he said, to dispose of recently recurrent rumors that Germany has been seeking opportunities to open talks with the Allies.

Any German peace emissary can approach the Western Allies only through the supreme commander, Gen. Eisenhower, the spokesman said, and the Western Allies will not cease fighting until Eisenhower gives the order.

PROCEDURE OUT

This he will not do until he gets an unconditional surrender from the German High Command, endorsed by the German General Staff, this source said.

The Germans then would be presented with a document informing them that the Allies demand a free hand in all matters relating to enemy forces, food, transport, economic and financial facilities, industry and political affairs.

Only if the Germans accept these terms will the "cease fire" order be issued.

TERMS DRAWN UP

The same conditions apply on the eastern and other fronts, he said. Thus the war will end only when military defeat of Germany is utter and complete and there will be no Germany alibi this time that they were not beaten on the battlefield, he added.

Surrender terms have been drawn up and agreed upon by the Allies, and under the terms of the agreement, there will be no chance for Hitler or any of his henchmen to come forward with an attempt to deceive the Allies, the spokesman pointed out, adding that it has been said officially that the Allies realize Propaganda Minister Goebbels will try to capitalize on the United Nations' uncompromising attitude. At the same time, he said, the Allies believe it well worth while, in the long run, to smash German military might and get a completely free hand for the settlement to follow.

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—(P)—Bishop James Cannon Jr., 79, Methodist churchman known nationally for his opposition to liquor and his participation in political controversy, died today in Wesley Memorial hospital of a cerebral hemorrhage.

He suffered an attack of heart disease last week and was removed from his hotel to the hospital. He had come to Chicago from his home in St. Louis for a meeting of the Anti-Saloon League with which he was identified for many years.

Bishop Cannon, who acquired prominence in political affairs through his efforts to defeat Alfred E. Smith for the presidency in 1928, retired in 1938 as bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, having served since May, 1913. After the church unification in 1939 he had the status of a retired bishop of the Methodist church.

Since then his principal activities have been with the Federal Council of Churches, of behalf of various peace organizations and in the Anti-Saloon League.

For a considerable portion of his lifetime Bishop Cannon was the center of ecclesiastical and political controversies. A bitter foe of liquor, he once described his work in that line as more than 40 years of "active anti-liquor warfare."

During the 1928 political campaign he was accused of opposing Al Smith because Smith was a Roman Catholic and Sen. Carter Glass, of Virginia, called Bishop Cannon "The Methodist Pope."

The bishop, however, contended his opposition to Smith actually was based on his own long fight against liquor.

The bishop's personal record was closely scrutinized, too. He was accused of "gambling" in the stock market and disposition of funds used against Al Smith in Virginia came under inquiry. But in 1930 he was exonerated by the general conference of his church in Dallas, Texas, after tearfully confessing he had erred in stock market ventures and promising he would not enter such activity again.

Less Cars for Atlanta

Predicting even smaller quotas for the coming months, the Atlanta district Office of Price Administration reports that only 72 new cars will be allocated to civilians in Georgia in September. This is the lowest quota of new cars allowed for Georgia since the war started. The nation's diminishing supply of new cars, which must last until production is resumed, necessitates the low quota, an OPA spokesman said.

There is nothing more essential to the successful production of a suit than...

Bishop Cannon, Al Smith Foe, Succumbs at 79

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—(P)—Bishop James Cannon Jr., 79, Methodist churchman known nationally for his opposition to liquor and his participation in political controversy, died today in Wesley Memorial hospital of a cerebral hemorrhage.

He suffered an attack of heart disease last week and was removed from his hotel to the hospital. He had come to Chicago from his home in St. Louis for a meeting of the Anti-Saloon League with which he was identified for many years.

Bishop Cannon, who acquired prominence in political affairs through his efforts to defeat Alfred E. Smith for the presidency in 1928, retired in 1938 as bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, having served since May, 1913. After the church unification in 1939 he had the status of a retired bishop of the Methodist church.

Since then his principal activities have been with the Federal Council of Churches, of behalf of various peace organizations and in the Anti-Saloon League.

For a considerable portion of his lifetime Bishop Cannon was the center of ecclesiastical and political controversies. A bitter foe of liquor, he once described his work in that line as more than 40 years of "active anti-liquor warfare."

During the 1928 political campaign he was accused of opposing Al Smith because Smith was a Roman Catholic and Sen. Carter Glass, of Virginia, called Bishop Cannon "The Methodist Pope."

The bishop, however, contended his opposition to Smith actually was based on his own long fight against liquor.

The bishop's personal record was closely scrutinized, too. He was accused of "gambling" in the stock market and disposition of funds used against Al Smith in Virginia came under inquiry. But in 1930 he was exonerated by the general conference of his church in Dallas, Texas, after tearfully confessing he had erred in stock market ventures and promising he would not enter such activity again.

He was a member of the Federal Council of Churches, of the Anti-Saloon League, and of the Methodist Episcopal church, south.

Lucca Taken, Battle Near In Po Valley

ROME, Sept. 6.—(P)—The decisive battle for northern Italy on the broad stretches of the Po river valley appeared near tonight after Eighth Army troops plunged within five miles of Rimini on the Adriatic coast and Americans on the opposite end of the front seized Lucca, provincial capital 10 miles northeast of Pisa.

Once Rimini is captured, Gen. Sir Harold Alexander will pour out onto the flatlands of northern Italy the greatest armored striking force ever assembled in the Mediterranean area to proceed with the annihilation of Field Mar. Gen. Albert Kesselring's armies.

Due south of Rimini, Canadian forces crushed all Nazi counterattacks and carved out new positions only five miles from the city's outskirts. Other Eighth Army units, striking directly up the coast, were reported less than six miles from their goal as enemy forces weakened considerably under combined blows by Allied ground troops, warships and planes.

Some of the fiercest fighting occurred around the key town of Coriano, seven miles south of Rimini and about two miles from the sea. Allied shock troops captured an important ridge running from Coriano to the coast and sent patrols for a time into the town itself.

The German First Parachute Division, which met the first assault of the Canadians below Rimini and tried desperately for nearly a week to stem the advance, was said to have been so mauled that it was relieved.

For the second day, two British destroyers stood offshore and slammed more than 600 shells into German batteries and gun positions guarding Rimini. An Allied communiqué said several batteries were silenced. Return fire from enemy guns was described as ineffectual.

Rimini, an ancient Roman port with a pre-war population of 85,000, is at the Adriatic terminus of a Po valley highway which runs northwest through Bologna into the heart of northern Italy's industrial regions. Ten miles northwest of the city is the Rubicon of Caesar's fateful crossing.

Lucca, captured by American patrols in the Fifth Army's thrust near the western end of the line, is an important communications center with a normal population of 82,000. An Allied announcement of its occupation did not mention any enemy resistance, leaving the supposition that Nazi troops in that sector had withdrawn into the depths of their Gothic Line defenses.

Miranda, Jessell To Attend 'Wilson' Premiere Here

By PAUL JONES.

Carmen Miranda, Trudy Marshall and George Jessel, newest additions to the growing list of stars who will attend the premiere of "Wilson" at the Paramount next Wednesday, will arrive in Atlanta Saturday by plane.

Dana Andrews, star of the recent "Wing and a Prayer," also will attend the opening in the company of Lamar Frotti, Atlanta who wrote the screen play; Daryl F. Zanuck, producer; Lynn Barri, Roddy McDowell and Alexander Knox. These stars will arrive beginning Sunday, from New York, Hollywood and Washington.

Lavish arrangements have been made to take care of the dozen or more stars and film executives, the names of several of which haven't been announced yet. More than 15 suites at the Biltmore hotel have been reserved for the visitors.

A round of social functions have been arranged by the Variety Club and the Young Matrons Circle of the Tallulah Falls school, under whose sponsorship the premiere is being presented. The stars will be feted in private homes, at luncheons and at parties in the various clubs, and special visits to the wounded men at Lawson are also scheduled.

The theater will be decorated with a giant replica of the White House, covering the entire front of the theater, and searchlights will light up the downtown area premiere night. Microphones of two Atlanta radio stations will be set up in the lobby and on the stage of the Paramount.

Miss Miranda, featured player in such movies as "The Gang's All Here" and "Greenwich Village," is one of filmdom's most colorful actresses. Trudy Marshall is a rising 20th Century Fox musical star, and Jessel, whose wit is known to millions of followers of the Broadway stage and radio, recently was signed to a producer's contract by Fox. Andrews is the latest of the Hollywood "man" actors.

The other guests are well known to Atlantans. Frotti, a former Atlanta newspaperman, and now one of filmdom's foremost writers, wrote the screen play for the new Technicolor biography of the great World War I president. Miss Barri has a number of screen hits to her credit and McDowell won acclaim in the juvenile role in "How Green Was My Valley."

Knox impersonates Wilson in the movie, his first big-time screen role after a career on the stage.

Officer Faces Liquor Charge

CORNER. In a liquor raid on his own farm, R. V. Anderson, for eight years a patrolman on the DeKalb county police force, is under $1,000 bail on a charge of illegally possessing non tax-paid whisky. Prior to furnishing bond, Anderson was locked up for a time in the county jail at Decatur.

Chief J. T. Dailey, of the DeKalb county police, participated in the raid. When he found Anderson in possession of liquor alleged to be non tax-paid, Chief Dailey personally placed him under arrest, stripped him of his badge and discharged him on the spot.

The raid took place at Anderson's smokehouse on a farm on Midway road, near Avondale, Monday night, according to Scott Candier, DeKalb county commissioner. The liquor, Candier said, was in half-gallon jars.

Federal and state revenue agents, as well as members of the county police, staged the raid. Candier said they discovered 180 gallons of non tax-paid liquor in Anderson's smokehouse. The raid, Candier added, was the result of an investigation he and Chief Dailey launched two weeks ago.

'Witness' Given 2 Years in Prison

James Burgess Stusak, of DeKalb county, who claims to be a Jehovah's Witness minister, was ordered by Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood to serve two years in prison after he refused to report for induction into the Army.

Stusak was convicted by a federal jury last April on charges of violating the selective training and service act and was given a two-year probation sentence provided he would report to his draft board with intentions of submitting to Army induction before August 15.

Stusak reported to his draft board, court officials said, but refused to be inducted into the Army. Judge Underwood revoked the probation sentence yesterday and placed Stusak in the custody of the United States marshal.

Mobile Election Probed by FBI

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 6.—(P)—The Mobile Press said today that the FBI, at the direction of the Department of Justice, is investigating complaints sent to Washington by Mobile Negroes that they were denied the right to vote in the Democratic primary here last May.

"In the Alabama Democratic senatorial primary," said a page one story in the Press, "which as in the past was restricted to white voters only, delegations of Negroes appeared at Wards 4, 6 and 7 with requests that they be permitted to vote. They were promptly denied their request and, the Press learned today, this resulted in written protests by some of the Negroes to Washington authorities."

The newspaper said reports reaching its office claimed the investigation had been under way for some time and that election officers of the three wards are among individuals being questioned.

Attempts of Mobile Negroes to participate in the primary came a short while after the United States supreme court ruled that Negroes were entitled to vote in the Democratic primary in Texas.

HARBOR

miles from the sea. It would cost $300,000.

In the making is a Savannah port authority plan to dredge the river to a depth of 34 feet for the first 26 miles from the sea. This plan is now before R. F. Rhodes, chief of the river and harbor engineering division at Savannah, who estimated the cost at approximately three and one-quarter million dollars.

CREWS AT WORK
J. E. Gorman, of Atlanta, of the United States Engineers Public Relations staff, arranged for the writers to see engineering progress on the Savannah harbor. After Gov. Arnall had publicly announced plans for creating a state port for Georgia, Editor John L. Sutlive, of the Savannah Press, said Savannah hopes to be the site of this state port.

As the postwar plans for a big sea trade with South American nations and other countries of the world were discussed, newsmen saw for themselves the daily working of the harbor maintenance engineering crews' monotonous toiling to keep the silt from accumulating on the river's floor above the 30-foot depth level.

Directing much of this work is W. M. Lucas, principal engineer of river and harbor maintenance. He showed the group the hopper dredge and the three pipeline dredges that work up and down the Savannah pumping out the mud at an annual maintenance cost of some $500,000.

This dredging of the river to maintain the 30-foot depth has been the principal activity of the engineers since 1937. Congress authorized the present rate station project in 1935, providing for the channel 30 feet deep and 500 feet wide.

ALONG RIVER
The group eased along the river on the "Mico," a 46-foot motor launch used by the engineers for surveying and inspection, boarded the hopper dredge "Culebra" 16 miles downstream and heard Capt. J. W. Berg tell how this dredge pumps mud into the boat and carries it to sea every one and one-half hours to empty. Then the writers returned near the city and watched the pipe line dredge "Dewitt Clinton" at work, pumping the silt through pipe lines to an island. They were luncheon guests of Capt. William Robertson.

The dredges pull 10 million cubic yards of dirt annually from the river bed, Lucas said. Work goes on 24 hours a day, with three crews alternating on each dredge. Engineers have been working on the Savannah harbor for more than a century, and have made many changes. The harbor originally contained numerous islands and shallow channels, Rhodes recalled. Prior to 1873, the south channel was the principal navigation channel. This was abolished and work concentrated on deepening and lengthening the north channel. By 1931, this north channel was 24 feet deep, and maintenance costs were high. Engineers are now studying plans to lessen maintenance costs.

FIVE CONNECTIONS
Savannah, which has five port and railroad connections, had an annual business of 3,880,120 tons back in 1940. The amount of business moving through the harbor today cannot be announced, but with large quantities of war material moving to the Allies from here, the business is a great deal larger.

A state port, added to the present facilities, would greatly increase commerce here, Savannahans said. Savannah tried back in 1927 to have a state port established, but the move was defeated in the legislature.

feet is planned by Savannah to care for larger ships expected in postwar days. Engineer Rhodes pointed out that many prewar vessels, which averaged turning 26 feet of water, have been lost in the war. Ships now being manufactured require 27 to 31 feet of water.

If congress passes the present rivers and harbors act, it not only will deepen the river four feet for the three-mile stretch above the Seaboard bridge, but it will nearly double the depth of the river between Augusta and Savannah, because, Rhodes said, the Clarkes Hill reservoir project near Augusta is included in the act. This project will deepen the present four-foot channel to 7.3 feet, he stated.

Reconversion To Be Swift, Krug Asserts

Auto Manufacturer Promises Production Within Three Months

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—(AP)—American industry can turn out simultaneously the war materials needed to defeat Japan and more consumer goods than were produced in 1939, the prewar peak year, War Production Board Chairman J. A. Krug said today.

Krug predicted that soon after Germany's defeat every civilian item that is "really needed" will be appearing again on the shelves of stores.

The WPB chairman made this forecast in a news conference discussion of last night's WLB announcement regarding restrictions to be lifted when the European phase of the war ends.

"We will remove every possible obstacle so that industry can move forward boldly," he said "but we are not going to supervise civilian production from here. We can help industry, but we cannot take over the job."

Krug cautioned that announcement of the reconversion plan should not be taken to mean that Germany's defeat is already at hand.

Krug predicted the people would be surprised by the speed with which industry can resume the production of civilian goods.

He said one automobile manufacturer had advised that he could get into production within three months, but Krug avoided speculation as to how long it would be until people can buy all they want of such things as cars, radios, washing machines, refrigerators and electric ranges.

Just before he met with reporters, Krug announced he had accepted "with great reluctance" the resignation of Operations Vice Chairman L. R. Boulware.

LITTLE 'GUNNER' NEEDS A FRIEND

"Gunner," a small brown and white mongrel dog, is being evicted from his present abode at Fort McPherson because he has overstayed his visit and unless his owner claims him in the near future he may be as homeless as any of the other transients who can't find a place to sleep in Atlanta.

Wearing what is almost identical to an Army identification tag with K-9 serial No. 4049663 and the name "Gunner" on it, the frisky young dog jumped off a train as it passed through East Point about a month ago. A resident of East Point saw "Gunner" when he jumped and took the friendly wanderer home with him.

A week ago "Gunner" was delivered to the veterinary at Fort McPherson, who is only allowed to keep stray dogs a short while and then must turn them over to the local dog pound.

The public relations office on the post has requested someone to come to the rescue of friendly little "Gunner."

RUSSIANS PRAISE ALLIED VICTORIES

MOSCOW, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The great Allied successes in France and the Lowlands are fully reported by the Soviet newspapers and radio, and in private conversation high-ranking Russian officials express warm admiration for the western offensive.

There has been no intimation of an effort to belittle or play down the victories of the Americans, British and Canadians. Limitations of the Soviet four-page newspapers naturally hold down coverage, but war news from the western front usually occupies about one-half of the back, or foreign, page. Maps giving details of the successes appear almost daily.

Big Three Agree On Peace Points

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—(AP)—British, Russian and American delegates to Dumbarton Oaks have now reached virtual agreement on all the major points of a postwar international organization to keep the peace, it was ascertained today.

In effect, this is tantamount to informal agreement among the three powers because although the Dumbarton Oaks recommendations must be sent to each capital for approval, the delegates have been in constant touch with their governments as each point came up.

The plan is understood to be close to the ideas brought to the conference by the United States. Both the American concept of representation of small powers on the organization's council and of a system of national force quotas rather than the Russian plan for an international air force are included.

A council, assembly and world court are the main structural points agreed upon.

James V. Carmichael, of Marietta, Ga., member of the Aeronautic Advisory Board and assistant manager of the Georgia division of Bell Aircraft Corporation, will outline prospects of co-operative development of aviation in the state.

Discussions of feeder airlines, postwar air training and future private airplanes are on the agenda.

OPA Probes Reports Of Landlord Violations

Reports that many Atlanta landlords have refused or failed to exhibit to new tenants copies of their OPA registration papers stating the maximum rent on the housing accommodations and services are being investigated by the Atlanta Defense Rental Area office, OPA disclosed.

Failure of landlords to show the registration form is in violation of OPA rent regulations and they become subject to action of OPA for such violation, officials said.

DOWN WITH HITLER

Nazi Cities Reported Rioting

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The Office of War Information quoted Swedish newspapers tonight as saying that anti-Hitler riots have broken out in a number of German cities.

The Stockholm Tidningen, the OWI said, reported crowds of women, soldiers and workers in "several" German cities had marched shouting "Down with Hitler—we want peace." It also reported clashes between civilians and SS (Elite Guard) units. The cities were not named.

A report by the Stockholm Aftonbladet to the OWI said the German garrison of Doberitz, near Berlin, had "mutinied" during the showing of a film on the execution of Field Marshal Erwin von Witzleben and that "shooting occurred."

A NAME OF FAME

"Wedgwood"

OUT OF THE RUDE 18th CENTURY CAME THE ART OF EXCELLENT POTTERY—WEDGWOOD! A DELIGHT AT ITS INCEPTION, AT PRESENT IT HAS AN EVEN MORE POWERFUL ATTRACTION, FOR THE NAME HAS LONG BEEN ASSOCIATED WITH QUALITY.

Josiah Wedgwood, youngest of a family of thirteen, was born in Staffordshire in 1730. AT THE AGE OF 9 YEARS THE LAD HAD TO LEAVE SCHOOL AND GO TO WORK ON A POTTER'S BENCH.

TWO YEARS LATER THE HORRIBLE EPIDEMIC OF THE CENTURY BROKE OUT—SMALL-POX! YOUNG JOSIAH SUFFERED ONE OF THE WORST CASES OF THE DREAD DISEASE, WHICH LEFT HIM A HOPELESS CRIPPLE!

JUST AS THE NAME WEDGWOOD SIGNIFIES FINE CHINA, THE REGISTERED TRADE NAME "SOUTHERN" STANDS FOR UNVARYING HIGH QUALITY BAKERY PRODUCTS. THAT'S WHY SOUTHERN BREAD AND CAKE IS THE FIRST CHOICE OF THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES THROUGHOUT THE SOUTH.

IN 1765 QUEEN CHARLOTTE ORDERED A COMPLETE TABLE SERVICE OF WEDGWOOD'S WARE. PLEASED WITH HIS WORK SHE REQUESTED THE SERVICE BEAR THE NAME "THE QUEEN'S WARE," AND THAT HE BE APPOINTED POTTER TO HER MAJESTY!

Trainmen Face Theft Charges

Federal charges of stealing a case of whisky from a railroad car here have been made against three train switchmen for the N. C. & St. L. railroad. Two others were charged with receiving stolen whisky.

U. S. Commissioner David J. Meyerhardt released Robert W. Busby, Henry Luther Jeffares and E. W. Longine, of Atlanta, under bonds of $400 each, following their arraignment on charges of theft from interstate commerce.

Mathew Bernice Millwood and J. L. Timms were released under bonds of $200 each on charges of accepting two quarts of the stolen whisky. Millwood pleaded guilty to the charge and Timms said he was given a quart of whisky which he poured out.

The men are expected to face a grand jury on the charges in November.

'Job Freeze' Remains Despite New Rating Here

Placing of Atlanta in a group four labor market meaning there is a surplus of labor available for war needs will not change the "job freeze" established here early in the spring, Sloan G. Springfield, WMC area director, said.

Although manpower problems appear to be diminishing in this area, all workers will continue to be processed by the United States Employment Service in changing jobs as has been done for the last three months.

Springfield said the chance for local plants to get new war contracts is much better since the labor situation has become improved.

Its capture, announced in the Soviet midnight communique, permits complete by-passing of the rugged Carpathian passes for a drive toward the Hungarian capital. The Russians kept silent on German reports that they also had already invaded Bulgaria.

The coinciding victory in Poland, for all its small advance in miles, was heralded by an order of the day from Premier Stalin and a 12-salute salute from 124 Moscow guns.

The advance was pressed through some of the thickest defensive positions on the whole eastern front and succeeded in clearing the east bank of the Narva river, an important German line, the Soviet communique said.

WARSAW OUTFLANKED

Stalin's recognition of the success may mean that the armies there have been ordered to invade East Prussia from the southern under-side.

Warsaw, already outflanked at a distance, was still the scene of bitter fighting, with the Russians announcing they had improved their positions northeast of the suburb of Praga and had recaptured Wolomin, 10 miles north-east, which has changed hands several times.

The Germans, saying the Russians had thrust several heavily reinforced tank and infantry divisions into that sector, admitted to-night that a breach had been made but claimed it later was liquidated.

The German Transocean Agency acknowledged, however, that the offensive, which it said was directed against the southern part of East Prussia, continued "with unabated violence," with "new Russian reserves being brought up continually."

For four days past, the Red armies of Marshal Rokossovsky and Gen. Zakharov have been prosecuting the drive to outflank Warsaw, 65 miles south and slightly west from Ostrolenka, and to lay the southern boundaries of East Prussia open to invasion.

ARMY'S 54-HOUR WEEK NEAR END?

Abolition of the 54-hour work week for the Army service forces is foreseen by Cong. Robert Ramspeck.

Ramspeck told the house of representatives at Washington yesterday the work week, ordered recently, "probably would be abolished within a month."

He said that "unquestionably the order was issued without sufficient study and many people have not had enough work to do under it," although some departments needed the longer week temporarily.

the fatherland and the Siegfried line.

Hitler's forces are expected to be able to offer nothing more than heavy delaying actions while the border defenses of the Reich are being strengthened. His main problem is manpower with which to hold the great bulging Allied line which runs several hundred miles over France, Belgium and Holland.

While the Third Army bears the brunt of the frontal assault on the Reich, the British Second and American First armies are driving toward other border defenses.

Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' First Army is pushing ahead swiftly on a broad front from three bridgeheads over the Meuse at and south of liberating Namur in Belgium. His total bag of prisoners from the Mons pocket in the last three days jumped to 25,000, including two major generals, and raised the First Army prisoner total since D-Day to 154,000.

250,000 PRISONERS

This brought to more than 250,000 the total prisoner haul of the American First and Third armies. Patton's forces having captured 76,000.

The British in Belgium have taken Malines and Leuven (Louvain) on the Albert canal, the latter town with its bridges intact. In view of this, a German communique indication today of a German stand along the canal lacked weight. The Germans claimed they had seized the only Allied position across the canal, and Berlin radio added that Germans still held positions in Antwerp. Allied headquarters said Antwerp, as well as Brussels, was being mopped up rapidly.

Canadians and Poles, who, with the British, are assaulting the pocketed German troops on the Pas de Calais coast—official estimates placed the number of trapped Germans there at about 50,000—have reached Cassel, 10 miles northeast of St. Omer, which the Poles have occupied. They also have reached Marguete, between

RAIN HAMPER PATTON

Continual rain has hampered the Third Army, which has been unable to use fully its great air superiority.

At Conflans, on the main road from Verdun to Metz, American forces ran into more resistance, and lost some tanks. This, however, merely slowed the advance, which pushed onward after a brief flurry of fighting.

Headquarters confirmed reports that the British Second Army to the north had entered Holland and that British armor was at the outskirts of the large Belgian city of Gent.

As invasion forces from both the north and south of France bore down steadily toward the steel and concrete Siegfried line, a senior staff officer at headquarters said this last-ditch hope of the Germans would prove no stronger than the Atlantic wall, if as strong.

"Of course we are going to break it," he said. Where it would be broken, he added, would be left to the Germans to worry about.

TRAPPED GARRISON

The Canadians, on the channel coast on both sides of the great port, sent a second ultimatum to the trapped garrison at Le Havre, and the German commander requested evacuation of the city's 50,000 civilians before the battle was begun.

splashing in the sea and spasmodic explosions. Fires were seen blazing in the outskirts of the city and RAF fighters droned monotonously toward Boulogne as the din increased. There was no Allied comment on these reports.

Brest, on the tip of Brittany, where an estimated 25,000 Nazis are hemmed in for the last-ditch stand, is being pounded constantly by RAF and American heavy bombers. Garrisons estimated at 10,000 each at St. Nazaire and Lorient are contained, although no assault against them has begun.

Thomas Dewey,
Trimmer of Sails

Before me is the presidential poll released by Fortune magazine. I take it one and all will agree Fortune magazine is not beating the bushes for Mr. Roosevelt.

The poll shows Mr. Roosevelt to have made substantial gains since the nomination of Mr. Thomas Dewey by the Republicans. I do not mean to say this is a trend. It may be. Nevertheless, the campaigns are not yet really under way. Mr. Dewey's was opened by speeches by several Republican governors. The opening guns were spiked by the revelation that the governors and Mr. Dewey's headquarters could not agree as to content. Three governors refused to go along with some of the more obvious ridiculous charges which had been suggested for their addresses.

I want to discuss Mr. Dewey for a few paragraphs. It is my opinion he is a man of character and honesty. He is a good American and the evidence points to the fact he is a good administrator in state government. He does not now have an even chance to win but it is entirely possible that events and his campaign will create such a possibility. If events do not help him, the Roosevelt strength will increase.

People are just beginning to know Mr. Dewey. They know Mr. Roosevelt well, what he thinks, believes and wants. They have had a long time to observe Mr. Roosevelt and the man and his personality are rather well fixed. It is difficult to change the minds of people about Mr. Roosevelt. They have rather well decided whether they are for him or against him.

Fatal Weakness? But they are just beginning to learn about covering the man's chief weakness which may well become a fatal weakness.

The record seems to indicate that Mr. Dewey, whose well-planned political ambitions began to be evident a decade ago, has made the error of trying to be all things to all men.

It is an admitted fact that he moves cautiously, using various polls to determine what the people happen to be thinking at that moment. He then trims his sails accordingly. While this may be effective in one or two particular campaigns it is the sort of thing which eventually catches up with a man.

Mr. Dewey's record is beginning to catch up with him and it will not be pleasant or easy for him to escape it.

The Record It was inescapable that Mr. Dewey's opposition should compile the various sail trimmings and present them publicly. They make interesting reading. For the sake of illustration, I present a few.

On Lend-Lease—No and yes: "The President's so-called defense bill (lend-lease) would bring an end to free government in the United States and would abolish the congress for all practical purposes." (Dewey, January 10, 1941.)

"With some reservations of power to the people through the congress I am satisfied that the house bill (this was the same lend-lease bill, with minor alterations) will be adopted. Speaking for myself alone, I hope it will be." (Dewey, February 12, 1941.)

On Internationalism—No and yes: "Let us join in praying tonight that men shall not be sent to kill in the fruitless struggle for power! That nations shall not be plunged into the despair of a struggle in which no one can win!" (Dewey, August 24, 1939.)

"We cannot be disinterested in the fate of the world. Nor do I believe that the United States can so isolate itself that it will not be seriously affected for better or for worse by what happens in other nations." (Dewey, April 29, 1940.)

On Russia—No, no, no, yes: January 20, 1940, speech before women's National Republican Club:

"A conspicuous and most unfortunate departure (of the administration) was the recognition by the New Deal of Soviet Russia.

"In that country, a godless government had raised to a state creed the sterile doctrine of atheism. It achieved power by the annual murder of large numbers of its own people. It is a perversion of government so abhorrent to the conscience of mankind.

"We need no such partnership."

May 26, 1944, quoted in Washington Star:

"Do you think," Dewey was asked, "it would be possible to broaden the base of such an alliance (he had been talking of an alliance with Britain, as outlined at the Mackinac meeting) to include any other of the United Nations?"

"It would be hoped," Dewey answered, "that in working out the structure of the peace we would have Russia and China in it at the beginning. We would hope that before the war comes to an end we would be able to reach a closer understanding with our Russian allies."

These are but a few examples. They are causing more and more persons to ask what Dewey really thinks and believes. If he cannot say, and make it stick, the Roosevelt trend will become a tide.

Mountbatten Reports
On Burma Campaign

It is but natural, as we watch the progress of the fighting in Europe, as we wait eagerly for news from the fronts in France and in Italy and from the Russian campaigns, that we forget, sometimes, there is another and a vitally important war going on in the Pacific, where we and our allies fight the Japanese.

Against the interest we divert to the Pacific fighting, we hear chiefly of attacks and successes by the air, sea and land forces of Gen. MacArthur in the southwest Pacific and those under Adm. Nimitz in the central Pacific.

There are other fighting fronts we should not ignore. There is, for instance, the campaign in Burma and along the Indian frontier, a campaign conducted by the Southeast Asia Command under the leadership of Lord Louis Mountbatten.

Not so long ago a report on the Burma campaign, made by Mountbatten, was made public at a London press conference. It is too long to give in full here, but some extracts should be informative and valuable.

700-Mile Fighting Front "Enemy-held territory in the Southeast Asia Command theater extends some 2,500 miles to the south from the north of Burma. The front on which we are at present fighting in Burma alone extends some 700 miles and is second only in length to the Russian front."

"It is Japan's land route to India and the Allies' land route to China. Both offensively and defensively, Japan has strained and is straining every nerve to hold Burma. . . .

"We are fighting from the most difficult lines of communication in the world. There were no roads into Burma from the north. The few roads of the Brahmaputra are unbridgeable. Assam is a logistical nightmare. Advancing from the west, as we are, we are fighting against the grain of the country, for its steep, jungle-clad mountains and swift-flowing rivers all running from north to south, constitute a barrier, not a route, between India and China. . . .

"What We Had Left" "From my original association with Combined Operations, many people, myself included, jumped to the conclusion that large-scale amphibious operations in southeast Asia would at once be the order of the day; but it need now be no secret that all the landing ships and craft originally allotted had to be withdrawn for more urgent operations in the west, and in fact carried the troops that assaulted the Anzio beaches and have subsequently been taking part in the invasion of France. . . . The order to us in Burma was to carry on with what we had left. I am proud to report that the order has been carried out during the past seven arduous months in a manner reflecting credit on all the forces of the United Nations engaged in the theater."

"Gen. Stilwell with great gallantry himself commanded the forces on the Leda front. He had under his command those Chinese forces which he had originally withdrawn from Burma to India and which had since been augmented."

"These forces are a good example of Allied collaboration, being equipped and trained by the United States and paid and fed by the British. The famous Marauders of the American Rangers contributed valiantly to the successful advance of this force down the Hukwang valley to Myitkyna and Mogauing. . . .

"The fighting in India, around Imphal and Kohima, was, in point of numbers engaged, one of the greatest land battles yet fought between Japanese and Allied forces and I am glad to say the Japanese are now flung from India. . . .

Heavy Casualties "All these impressive results have not been secured without heavy casualties. Allied forces in 1944 have suffered 10,000 killed, 3,000 missing and 27,000 wounded, but this they have amply avenged by killing 50,000 Japanese. . . . We have practically swept the Japanese air force from the Burma skies. . . . The naval balance of power is being steadily redressed in southeast Asia. The Japanese navy is now as afraid to accept action in the Indian ocean and the Bay of Bengal as it is in the Pacific. . . . Look upon Burma as one big Allied effort of the British, American and Chinese with the help of the Dutch and the other nations that are with us. It is going extremely well as an Allied effort. We do not want a lot of lime-light; in fact, we do not want any ourselves, but I go around and talk to the men in command, and what worries them is that their wives, mothers, daughters, sweethearts and sisters should feel that the war they are fighting is important and worth while—which it most assuredly is."

Something Is Brewing

Every sign indicates that some important development is under way on the European battle front.

SHAFF has clamped a news "blackout" on the movements of American forces which are either close to the German border or already on enemy territory.

Germany's official propagandist, Gen. Karl Dittmar, has told the German people the war is lost, that the only means left to defend their homeland is by using third-rate home defense troops.

Gen. Eisenhower has broadcast a call to the millions of slave laborers who have been forced to work in German war factories, to abandon their jobs and to sabotage the German industries.

It may be that Allied forces have slowed their advance, or are marking time, deliberately, while ultimatum is sent to the Nazi leadership. Such an ultimatum would point out the hopelessness of the German position and demand unconditional surrender now, to avoid further, and useless, loss of life.

It may be that Allied forces are, even now, launching an attack which will smash through the vaunted Siegfried line.

On all fronts German power to resist is broken. Only at isolated spots, such as Warsaw, on the East Prussian border, at some points in the Italian fighting, are the Germans holding against Allied or Russian assault. To all intents and purposes the "inner fortress," Germany herself, is encircled. With overwhelming manpower and weight of materiel, the Allies are poised for the final chapter that will end only with complete German surrender.

Finland has ended her war with Soviet Russia. All along the 500 miles of the Finnish battle front the guns are silent. Germans are reported withdrawing from the little country of the north. The Finnish government has promised that any German troops left in their country by September 15 will be disarmed and interned.

Thus ends one of the strangest stories of the recent years of war.

Finland has twice fought Russia. The first time was to repulse Russian attack across Finland's borders. In that war the sympathy of the people of the United States was almost 100 per cent with the Finns who made so heroic a fight to defend their border. But it ended as it had to, in Russian victory. The weight of Russian armor and manpower was too much for the fighting Finns.

We know now, in the light of later events, that all Russia sought in that conflict was to improve her defensive positions against the German attack she knew was coming soon.

Then, when Germany attacked the Soviet, little Finland, by geographic position under German dominance, again fought Russia, this time as an ally of the Germans. And now has again come the inevitable surrender to a more powerful enemy.

Finland ends her war holding the full respect of all the Allied Nations, even though she has fought against them. She will, undoubtedly, suffer. That cannot be avoided.

But, even though on the wrong side, the valor shown by the armies of Finland has won the fullest respect of her foes. What is thought of the Finns in those strangely distorted minds of the Nazified Germans, we cannot guess. There is, however, one indication. If, as reports say, it is true the German divisions are now withdrawing peacefully from Finland, it is the first time they have withdrawn from any country without wreaking vengeful destruction upon it.

ROBERT QUILLEN

All Must
Obey the Rules

Malta is a little island of 95 square miles in the Mediterranean south of Sicily. It has been owned and occupied by the Phoenicians, Greeks, Carthaginians, Romans, Saracens, Sicilians and French. In 1814 it was annexed by Great Britain at the request of the Maltese.

But the island's 200,000 mixed-breed people, chiefly Italian, have always been restless under the British yoke. Most of them cheered for Mussolini, while he was winning, and they are Fascists still—chiefly because of their grudge against Britain.

Last year a British captain parked his car in front of a British office and returned to find a young Maltese thief searching it for loot. He took the youngster to the British military police, but was told that such matters were handled by the Maltese civil authorities.

When he took the kid to the Maltese police, he got the shock of his life. The thief was turned loose and the British captain was jailed.

In prison he remained for nine long months, with no companionship save that of rats and vermin, while local British authorities vainly labored and pulled strings to obtain his release.

His colonel appealed to the British military governor, the famous Gen. Gort, and the general appealed to Churchill, but nothing came of it.

When the captain at last was brought to trial, he was given another 13 months at hard labor, though the sentence eventually was reduced to three months. His crime? "Without authority." (Any American citizen may arrest a criminal caught in the act.)

The captain had acted without authority and the whole British navy plus the whole British empire did not have enough authority to set aside the verdict of a little Maltese judge.

The British in Malta were fighting mad. They must have longed to brush aside the civil authorities, slap down the police and break open the jail. Hitler would have done it in one minute flat, and thus turned dislike into hatred and made necessary the use of continual force.

That is the difference between government by a dictator and government by law. In a world governed by voluntarily accepted rules, the hateful weak may take advantage of their weakness, but the strong must not abuse their strength. The proof of a man's belief in law is that he will not use force to obtain justice when he has the power to do it.

How sad it is to know the world is filled with weary souls

Who struggle through unending days to reach their chosen goals
While other people who are not as good as them, perhaps,
Just wait around 'til fortune dumps her produce in their laps.
The road to wealth and happiness, to pinnacles of fame,
Is full of creeping travelers, the crippled and the lame,
Beset by many obstacles, with hazards and with checks
That thwarted their ambitions 'til their lives are total wrecks.
Some women, for example, bear with Spartan fortitude
Some way to skip the lengthy road; they take a shorter route
And while their patient brethren are toiling night and day
They've reached the goal and had their feed and gone to hit the hay.
Or else they're painting up the town and drinking at the bars,
Or sitting on a cushioned chair and smoking fat cigars.

EVELYN HANNA

Indian Love Legend Preceded Leggers

Recently in Savannah a former Upon county man asked me about the "Blue Hills" here. He was referring to specific ones that are visible from the northwestern part of the county, the foothills of the Pine Mountain chain. A soft haze hangs over them always. There are no sharp outlines against the sky, but rather a blending of the blue-green pines into the haze which appears to be a fringe of the sky itself.

The loom is gentle, for they are friendly hills, not tall enough to evoke awe or wonder, but they rise above the flat, sun-baked monotony of south Georgia like a promise of the real mountains to come farther north. They are hills to dream about, and it is small wonder that the natural phenomena they enclose—Warm Springs and The Cove in Meriwether county, Dripping Rock and Thundering Springs in Upon, have legends to explain their existence.

A geologist would have had a scientific explanation, but the pioneers who settled this country were, for the most part, farmers; and at the time of the Civil War there were scarcely more than a handful of families scattered about between Crest and Woodbury.

For that reason, as well as for the natural protection of the heavily wooded hills, draft-dodgers sought sanctuary there in the sixties, and food was smuggled in to them. At the approach of the Yankees, Confederates fled there with their stock.

Later, it was a great place for moonshiners, and not all of the smoke that arose could be attributed to haze.
Then for many years a great deal of the land, some 10,000 acres, was owned by Mr. Zach Lawrence, and only recently his son, Jeff, sold a large tract for a Boy Scout camp. "Dripping Rock isn't just one rock," he says, "it extends like a shelf along the river bank for about a mile and a half. Have you seen it?"

"Oh, yes! I walked there from the Higgins place, trying to save tires. And quite a walk it was. But we couldn't find the falls."
"They are about a half mile back in the mountains, one of the prettiest places I've ever seen. There's a sheer 40-foot fall of clear spring water dropping into a pool surrounded by ferns and shrubbery."

"How do you account for the dripping, Mr. Lawrence? Is it caused by subterranean springs?"
"Yes. That's why the mountain laurel, ivy and azaleas grow so well, as large as trees, you know. It's a sight to see in the spring-time." I agreed, and said I was glad it had not been ruined by power plants.

"Well, it came very near being the site of a cotton mill," he told me. "There's an enormous amount of water power there. Papa had it surveyed and a plat made when the project was under discussion. The title extends across the water, and papa owned two-thirds of it. Gov. Terrell the other. He went up to see the governor—that was sometime between 1908 and 1912—and they agreed on a price. But two weeks later, before the papers had been drawn up, Gov. Terrell died."

"And so it continued to be used only by Sunday school picnickers. They came over on the M. & B. you know, but even the M. & B. was almost washed away when we had the floods and the landslide. You don't remember that? I suppose not, it was in 1902, and if it wasn't a flood, it was the next thing to it. The railroad was out of commission for about 20 days. The height of the ledge along the river was increased then. Did you notice how sharp and jagged they

FDR Fortune Origin Traced

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Mrs. Roosevelt's autobiography, published several years ago, is one of my favorite books and every time I dip into it I am tantalized by the atmosphere of luxury pervading the story and the author's iron reticence concerning the sources of the Delano fortune.

Now I think I understand.

The old gent, Warren Delano, President Roosevelt's grandfather, was an old-time opium smuggler, member of something rather like our own rum row which operated off the New York coast a few years ago. The ships ran the stuff from India into China, whose emperor had seen the ravages of the drug among his people and was trying to saw them off.

You have to do a great deal of studious reading to get at the facts, but if you are patient you find in Lawrence Kearny, sailor diplomat, written by Carroll Storrs Alden, in 1876, this statement: "In 1834, when 25, Warren Delano went to Macao . . . and in the following year, was made a partner in Russell & Company. He was one among American merchants who, with British merchants, were imprisoned by the Chinese in the walled-in area of Canton, the event which led to the so-called opium war."

"Since 1800, traffic in opium was illegal in China. The Emperor Tao-Kwang directed the suppression of importation and use under the penalty of confiscation and death."

Alden was head of the department of English and history at the United States Naval Academy. Mrs. Roosevelt, incidentally, mentions vaguely the fact that Delano lived in China many years and was a member of Russell & Company.

Commodore Kearney, the subject of the book, served 54 years in our Navy. The commodore, in his papers, says Delano was our vice consul in Canton, and later, says "small assistance can be had from the commercial agent of the United States in Canton who is a member of a firm deeply interested in this nefarious traffic."

In a volume called the "Clipper Ship Era" by Arthur H. Clark, who commanded several ships in the China trade, it is written that the British had a monopoly until certain American firms horned in, attracted by the tremendous profits to be made by the exploitation of the Chinese addicts. He mentions several ships and says: "These vessels, owned by . . . Russell & Company, soon controlled the opium trade and were known as opium clippers."

"They all made a great deal of money for their owners until they were superseded by steamers."
In another book, called "The Opium Clipper," Basil Lubbock writes that the head partner of Russell & Company, of which Delano was also a partner, was "directly responsible for practically all of the American clippers in the opium trade."

In a pamphlet published in 1833 by Nathan Allen called "The Opium Trade," there is a footnote which says, "This (Russell & Company) is the only American firm as far as we can learn, engaged in the traffic. And what is the amount of capital invested we have no means of knowing. The same censures which are applied to the English should also be meted out to all Americans engaged in this traffic."

In an earlier pamphlet, Allen wrote: "There is no slavery on earth to be compared with the bondage into which opium casts its victims. There is scarcely one known instance of escape from its toils when once they have fairly enveloped a man."

Robert Montgomery Martin, in a book called "China, Political and Commercial," published in 1847, describes a rendezvous of more than 30 opium boats at Canton and says: "At Canton, the foreign residents, with two or three unimportant exceptions, are all identified with the opium trade." He also says: "An American firm, Russell & Company, have four (opium ships) on the coast and three between India and China under the American flag."

Delano died in 1898, leaving a personal estate of $1,338,000. He had married twice and was the father of nine children, among them Sarah Delano, who married James Roosevelt and became the mother of Franklin D. Roosevelt. As Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt reveals in her life story, the family lived richly and without toil and traveled abroad at will during a period when only the very well-to-do could afford European travel.

When the President's mother died, the state transfer tax appraisal filed at Poughkeepsie indicated that the fortune had been kept almost intact. The family had had boats, country mansions, town houses, servants and horses down the years and still Mrs. Roosevelt left $1,238,361, of which $29,000 was invested in government bonds and $10,000 in war bonds.

OBJECTIONS TO "UNLIMITED TENURE"

(From the Chicago Tribune.)

Mr. Roosevelt's fourth-term supporters are required also to support unlimited tenure in the White House and to oppose restriction by constitutional amendment. If these supporters are Democrats they must reject their party's fairly consistent record. They lay claim to Thomas Jefferson as founder. He viewed unlimited tenure with unlimited alarm. The party's platform declarations have maintained Jefferson's opinion. Woodrow Wilson was nominated with such a platform.

Left wing New Dealers may be spared the embarrassment of apostasy. Free government is not their objective. When they have a useful man they want to keep him. The more embarrassed defenders of the fourth and subsequent terms have found the argument that limitation would be a restriction of free choice and deprive the people of their rights.

Two-thirds vote of both houses of congress is needed to submit a constitutional amendment and the assent of three-fourths of the states is required for adoption. Unless the country agreed that the limitation was wise it could not be imposed. A republic with a constitution undertakes to provide against certain temporary impulses. It undertakes to bridge over periods of strain and stress. It adopts fundamental rules which are to prevail against sudden inclinations and excitements. Congress exists under certain limitations. It cannot establish a religion even if a majority of the citizens wished to do so. It cannot abridge freedom of speech or of the press.

SENATOR SOAPER

After a German commander has pepped up the rank and file by telling them Himmler is dead, it one remains for Heinrich to make good.

One trusts that Franz von Papen remembered the amenities and, on departing Ankara, remarked, "I've been thrown out of better countries."

They had to go back to point-ratting ham. It was the only way to distribute Congressman Fish equally among the people.

The sore-beset Fuesher asks the German masses for "blind confidence." It is something he never got from the generals. They believed their own eyes.

The Laval captured by Bradley's boys in Normandy is a town of course, but if Pierre has any imagination his shudders are visible for blocks.

A limitation of tenure in the presidency would, if adopted, represent the mature judgment of the people that it was unsafe to allow the privileges, prerogatives and powers of office to build up a personal following of great extent and many ramifications for the carrying of elections. Ambition for unlimited tenure would result in administration for that purpose and not for the good of the country.

Until Mr. Roosevelt came along with his emergencies, excitements, and revolutionary trends, animated by an intense craving for authority, usage had limited the tenure. It was called the unwritten law. Parties recognized it and Presidents submitted to it. A man suspected of a desire to take more than eight years was regarded as conceited and arrogant. Public opinion was well formed on this subject. Politicians may have had some yearnings for the profits of long tenure, but they knew the grapes were beyond reach. The present incumbent in extraordinary times was able to break down the rule which had prevailed unbroken before him. Now a new precedent is established. No successor need limit his ambition. He can enter office with the intention of remaining there and to do so devote all his resources to the carrying of elections.

Unlimited tenure will change

DAMON RUNYON

Songs of This War Express Tenderness

"What," said the lady who listens to the radio, "is the difference between the songs of World War I and the songs of World War II?"
"The songs of World War II are better, promptly replied the New Runyon, who never listens to the radio except for Winchell and Drew Pearson, and once in a while Fred Allen."

I say the New Runyon because the Old Runyon would have been dumb enough to vote for the songs of World War I and start an argument. The lady who listens to the radio had obviously not expected this answer and for a moment was greatly nonplussed.

"Well, what makes the songs of World War II better?" she asked. "What quality?"

"Now let me see," said the New Runyon, musingly. "Tenderness," exclaimed the lady triumphantly.

Now that could be. Yes, that could very well be. But first let us determine what is meant by war songs. The songs dealing directly with a war or the songs of the certain period of a war?

I think the latter, myself. I mean we identify certain songs with a certain war and in a sense they are songs of that war. "Hot Time in the Old Town" was not about war, but we always think of it in connection with the Spanish-American War. "Long Trail" and "Tipperary" are not about war, but whoever thinks of them except in connection with World War I?

So, then, I reckon the next generation will have "I'll Walk Alone" and "I'll Be Seeing You" and "Long Ago and Far Away" with World War II, though "I'll Be Seeing You" was written four or five years ago for one of Art Childers' shows at his Royal Palm Night Club in Miami by nice little Sammy Fain and a fine lad named Irving Kahal, who died without ever knowing he had a great hit.

The song "I said there," as the saying is, as far as the general public is concerned, mainly through lack of plugging and the great night club entertainer, Hildegarde, brought it to life. Even the song hits of "Oklahoma!" are apt to be identified as war songs because they belong to this era.

World War I's greatest martial song was undoubtedly "Over There," by George M. Coran, a triumphant paean that has yet to be equalled in this war, though "Army Air Corps" and "Marine Hymn" and Irving Berlin's new song about the infantry, are tremendous songs. Berlin's "Oh, How I Hate To Get Up in the Morning" was a song of World War I in a revival of this war through "This Is the Army." Many of our earlier war songs of this war have already been forgotten, and in some cases that is a very good thing. A lot of tripe was turned out by songsmiths struggling to meet the occasion. But there was just as much tripe turned out for World War I—may be a little more, in fact. Or may be there just seemed to be more because it was around longer. The radio kills them off very quickly—good, bad and indifferent.

Very well, then, conceding the argument of the lady who listens to the radio that we have more tenderness in the current songs than those of the days of "Madelon" and "Katy." I think it is because the war has been in progress so much longer than was our experience in World War I that the song-writing lads have had time to get away from the slapdash and the synthetic and to turn to the truer and deeper emotions.

What general public has not yet heard the alleged smash hit of the Army in Europe, the German "Lili Marlene," which some clobbers were saying we had "captured" from the Boche, but I will take a bet now against it being remembered longer out of this war than Julie Styne's and Sammy Cahn's "I'll Walk Alone" or the Robertson-Hoffman-Weldon piece, "Good-night, Whensover You Are."

My own preference right now is "Milkman, Keep Those Bottles Quiet."

College Name To Honor Truett

Sec. of State John B. Wilson announced issuance of a name certificate for the George Truett Junior College at Blairsville, Ga.

Wilson said this was the first step in establishment of a college in the north Georgia mountains to perpetuate the memory of the late Dr. George W. Truett, of Dallas, Tex., internationally known Baptist minister and former president of the Baptist World Alliance.

Wilson said yesterday, Superior Judge Tom Candler, of the North-eastern judicial circuit, had made a gift of 150 acres of land and $1,000 cash toward establishment of the school.

Dr. Truett was born in North Carolina, just over the Georgia state line. However he began his teaching and preaching career in north Georgia.

Application for the name was filed with the secretary of state by E. S. Williams, of Bessie Tift College, Forsyth, Ga.

Wilson said Williams indicated that a charter for the college would be sought immediately.

Labor Complaint Made Against Georgia Plant

A complaint charging the Reynolds corporation with unfair labor practices in its fuse plant at Milledgeville, Ga., has been issued by the National Labor Relations Board and will be heard by an NLRB examiner at Milledgeville on September 18.

The board said yesterday the complaint was made by the United Steel Workers of America (CIO), which charged the company attempted to discourage membership in the union and discharged five employees who "joined or assisted the union."

The corporation has headquarters at Richmond, Va., and operates a fuse plant at Macon, Ga., but only the Milledgeville plant is involved.

The complaint alleges further that the management sponsored organization of a rival labor organization known as the Workers' Welfare Association, Inc., and "assisted, dominated, contributed to the support of and interfered with the administration" of the association.

The CIO union charged that General Manager H. G. Smith asserted he saw "no reason for a union in this plant," and that company representatives told employees at a meeting on May 19 that "events which affected production included dissension, taking of sides or personal arguments" and that "anyone who willfully engaged in any activity regarding production was guilty of treason." The plant manufactures fuses and fuse parts for the Navy.

Ernest Gann's Latest Book Of Twofold Interest Here

A new book, "Island in the Sky," by Capt. Ernest Gann, has a twofold interest for Atlantans: first, because it is a fascinating story and, second, because the author is the nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Gann and Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Milam.

Capt. Gann, it seems, was with the American Airlines prior to America's entrance into the war. He has been loaned to the government for the duration and up to the time of his writing the book, he had made 89 crossings, flying transport planes from America to the theaters of war.

"Island in the Sky" is based on actual facts and experiences. It tells dramatically of the rescue of a plane crew, forced down in the wilds of Canada, 600 miles inland, with the author as a member of the rescue party.

Capt. Gann has written a number of other volumes, outstanding among which are "Skyways" and "All-American Aircraft."

News breaks so fast for the members of the Tallulah Young Matrons' Circle these remaining days before their premiere of "Wilson," that Elma (Mrs. Robert) Adamson, the general chairman, and Billie (Mrs. Carl) Sloan, the publicity director, are all in a dither. Just as The Listening Post was going to press, Billie called in great excitement.

"Guess who's coming to the premiere now?" she queried. "Of course you'd never suspect such good luck, so I'll tell you. Carmen Miranda, Trudy Marshall, and George Jessel!"

So it begins to look like there will be almost as many film celebrities on hand next Wednesday evening as the city harbored for the memorable premiere of "Gone With the Wind."

This trio will arrive on Saturday to be guests at the Biltmore until after Wednesday. Carmen and Trudy, you know, are Twentieth Century-Fox stars, and Mr. Jessel is a joint producer of the film, "Wilson."

When Mary Louise Hastings matriculated at Vassar last week, she began to realize her life's ambition! Since she can remember, she has wanted to go to Vassar to study dramatics. So she is majoring in drama and English, with special emphasis on the former, which may perhaps lead to a dramatic career. Who knows? Of course everyone recognizes Mary Louise's remarkable histrionic talent, for she has starred in school plays since her kindergarten days, and she is pretty enough to adorn any setting, stage or otherwise.

She and her mother, Louise (Mrs. Donald) Hastings, spent a week in New York before going on to Poughkeepsie. They were joined there by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hastings and their daughters, who drove up from Pennsylvania to meet them. Together they visited the popular night spots and the theater, witnessing the new operetta, "The Song of Normandy," which stars Irre Petina, "The Voice of the Turtle," and "One Touch of Venus."

Mrs. Hastings and Mary Louise also visited Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rockwell at their charming country place at Nyack, N. Y. He is editor of that favorite magazine, "Garden and Home," so he and Mrs. Hastings have much in common.

After seeing her daughter comfortably settled at Vassar, Louise returned to Atlanta just long enough to repack her bags and leave with Donald for High Hampton Inn at Cashiers, N. C., for a much needed rest. Getting a daughter ready for college is something of a task, especially when you undertake all of the planning and much of the actual sewing on an extensive wardrobe.

Do you know? . . . That Betty Haverly has taken a full-time job with the telephone company! . . . That Jimmy Purnell, U. S. N. R., recently dined in London with Lady Astor, who is a cousin of his mother, Mrs. James Purnell? . . . and that his wife, who is also serving with the Navy, is Lt. Florrie Sisson Purnell? . . . That Alice Johnson will report for her new job at the airport on Monday? . . . That the Girls' Battalion staged a rumba contest at its dance Tuesday evening and that Teddie McKenzie and her Army officer boyfriend won first prize? . . . that the other contest was won by Louise Stromberg and Lt. Don Hooten, who was a professional dancer before joining the armed forces?

Keep America Physically Fit By Using Basic-Seven Foods

By SALLY SAVER.

Keeping Americans on the front physically fit is no small job and the main responsibility for it falls squarely upon the homemaker. For it is she who buys the family's food, and chooses the combinations for mealtime. Some one so wisely put it "All food is good; it is the combinations that make the difference between sound or inadequate nutrition."

That's the idea we must keep in mind as we proceed to observe wartime nutrition month, this September. September is to be devoted, all over the United States, to an all-out effort to guide Americans into sound eating habits for the purpose of obtaining the maximum health and strength to meet the demands of war. It is no small aim the War Food Administration has set before the nutrition-conscious; but it is one of vital importance, for with fewer goods and services available these who have increased income are spending more of it on food. But not always the right food. There is still a great deal of malnutrition in the United States, and it would be well for each homemaker to make a careful analysis of her family's food and eating habits, for malnutrition is not confined as so many believe, to low income groups. Many of the cheapest and simplest foods are the richest sources of vitamins and minerals.

Decayed Teeth Prevented by Good Nutrition

"Probably no other country has so many dentists and such well-trained ones as the United States," says Prof. Barnett Sure in his book "The Little Things in Life" (Appleton-Century, 1937). "Toothache, however, due to abscesses and caries is common everywhere; so are inflamed and swollen gums, which frequently are associated with pyorrhea that results in loose teeth. . . . Clinical observations, however, indicate that the activity and extent of dental caries (decay, cavity-formation) may be quite unrelated to the degree of mouth cleanliness. Relatively clean teeth may be extremely decayed, and filthy mouths may contain sound teeth and healthy gums."

Whatever the Professor meant by "filthy" is beyond my comprehension. But if you ask me, I'll take the "filthy" mouth and sound teeth and healthy gums and you may have the "relatively clean" extremely decayed teeth. Here Professor Sure is expressing in popular language what Weston A. Price, D.D., has clearly shown in his classical study "Nutrition and Physical Degeneration" (Hoover of Harper & Bros., '40) and I, in my best built-in-china style, have been trying to pound into the heads of dentists, doctors and people who read this column when they have nothing interesting or instructive to read.

If brushing the teeth regularly could prevent tooth decay the American people should have the best teeth in the world, for surely no other people use toothbrushes and dentifrices as much as Americans do.

In a talk to follow I'll describe what I consider a clean mouth and how to keep it clean. Here I merely confess I don't know what the dentist or the professor means by a "filthy" mouth or what makes it "filthy," if it is not the presence of cavities in the teeth or atrophy, wasting, degeneration of the gums. I sincerely believe that decay of the teeth (caries, cavity formation) cannot be prevented by the most meticulous use of toothbrush or dentifrice. I believe it can be prevented by good nutrition, good dental treatment and good sanitation.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By ALICE BENTON JENNINGS

March 21-April 19 (ARIES)—Previous to 2:30 p. m. favors domestic interests, general business, and legal matters. After 2:30 p. m. favors agreement, contracts and legal matters.

April 20-May 20 (TAURUS)—Before 3:30 p. m. use conservative methods in all affairs. Not an especially auspicious period for dealings with those in high positions. From 3:30 p. m. and throughout the remainder of the day use care in contacts with others, and be careful not to state exactly what you think your name to.

May 21-June 20 (GEMINI)—The entire day does not favor new beginnings. Handle electrical equipment and motor vehicles especially carefully today. The day does not especially favor signing papers and use caution in dealing with relatives.

June 21-July 21 (CANCER)—Previous to 5:00 p. m. favors routine affairs in your life, but suggests caution in secret deals, around liquids, and fire chemicals. The remainder of the day is auspicious for making progress in those things that will advance your standing, dealings with people who are conservative and responsive, and in those things that are matured slowly.

July 22-Aug. 22 (LEO)—The entire day is favorable for making progress in trading, selling, contracts, communications and travel, should result most happily before 1:30 p. m. After 1:30 p. m. pleasure and sociability may not bring the best results.

Aug. 23-Sept. 22 (VIRGO)—Investments, financial dealings, seeking favors from legal and medical people are most previous to 10:15 a. m. Between 10:15 and 12:30 p. m. favors study to routine.

Sept. 23-Oct. 22 (LIBRA)—Use caution around shipping and in transportation. Irritability, bantiness and sarcasm should be held in check and give attention to practical matters.

Oct. 23-Nov. 21 (SCORPIO)—The period previous to 1 p. m. favors matters of ordinary importance along domestic, business and personal lines. After 1 p. m. does not appear to favor new or important undertakings.

Nov. 22-Dec. 21 (SAGITTARIUS)—Previous to 1:15 p. m. favors routine affairs and 4:20 p. m. favors attending to old matters. The remainder of the day does not favor new plans. An excellent time to stick to routine.

Dec. 22-Jan. 19 (CAPRICORN)—The entire day favors commercial and financial dealings with neighbors and relatives. Do not expect too much from social affairs this month.

Jan. 20-Feb. 18 (AQUARIUS)—Before 3:30 p. m. is an excellent period to evolve new ideas and methods. Great strides can be made along intellectual, educational and legal lines. After 3:30 p. m. favors attending to routine matters and avoiding extremes.

Feb. 19-March 20 (PISCES)—New beginnings today should be surprisingly successful. An excellent day for obtaining better co-operation for business, for plans benefiting others and for decisions in general.

Back to school go two little sisters, Clare, left, and Louise McCarey, wearing clothes that are practical as well as pretty. Clare's is a jumper frock of red corduroy. It is edged with white braid. With it she wears square neck white blouse with peasant embroidery trim. Louise wears a red plaid skirt, pleated all around, with a solid red short-sleeved sweater.

The jumper is $2.98; blouse, $2.29. The plaid skirt, rayon and wool, is $3.98; the sweater, $2.29.

The WORRY CLINIC

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

Experience Still Best Teacher

While it is possible for a "brain-truster" to express scientific facts, wouldn't you prefer to send your son or daughter to a college professor who could also practice successfully what he was taking your tax money to teach your children how to perform?

CASE D-247: Eileen M., aged 38, is a college graduate.

"Dr. Crane, you seem to discredit the do-less teacher in favor of the one who can practice what he teaches," she began.

"I have a sister who has made quite a name for herself because of a book she has written on 'How To Write a Short Story.'"

"But my sister never sold a short story in her life, and could never have done so because she had a one-track mind."

"But I understand that she was the hardest worker in her English department."

"Dr. Crane, don't you think a person can be a good teacher without being able to do the thing she is teaching?"

DIAGNOSIS

"Yes, it would not be impossible for a person to teach a subject without being able to demonstrate practical proficiency in that realm, as witness the majority of college professors today."

This is the "brain truster" theory so evidently demonstrated in government.

But if two men are applying for a teaching job, as in the department of English, and are to instruct your boys and girls in how to write a short story, which would you taxpayers prefer to support?

The man who had never been able to sell a short story in the 700 magazines in America which clamor for material, or the one who had sold at least a few stories and thus had demonstrated a reasonable practical grasp of the theories he was teaching?

BRAIN TRUSTER PROFESSORS

Or if you were going to need a surgical operation, would you prefer a physiologist who could orally learnedly about gall bladder disease or appendicitis, but had never performed an operation on any human being.

In contrast to that type of doctor, wouldn't you prefer the man who had not only studied the physiology or anatomy of the gall bladder and appendix, but who had also successfully removed a number of these diseased organs from patients?

In medicine, we will not permit a doctor to practice until he serves an internship and has actually done the things which he is expected to engage in during private practice.

Your dental students likewise serve in clinics and perform under a professor's eye the various feats of dental surgery which they will later do in their private offices.

INTERNSHIP FOR TEACHERS

But our professors, especially of the college level, are not required to serve any such internship or apprenticeship.

They are not required to know the a-b-c's of good public speaking, so many of them put their students to sleep and thereby kill the vital interest of youth by their own oratorical ineptitude.

How can students grow enthusiastic about a subject when the teacher is evidently unfit to practice what he is trying to tell them so authoritatively how to perform?

While there are a number of excellent teachers in the colleges, they certainly are not in the majority, as you can readily discover by visiting a few classrooms, or surveying your sons and daughters who are now in college.

Furthermore, the unfit teachers are the ones who protest so loudly at my public indictment of "brain truster" professors. The good teachers know I speak the truth, and are chuckling at my bulletin, "A long stamped addressed envelope and a dime to cover typing or printing costs when you seek personal advice or one of his psychological charts."

In the Air

BY PAUL JONES

"America's Town Meeting of the Air," which in nine years of broadcasting has attained a position foremost among the nation's radio forums, will continue its policies of presenting leading authorities for both sides in objective discussions of important, controversial subjects, when it becomes a sponsored series beginning today at 7:30 p. m. over station WAGA.

That broadcast will be devoted to the topic, "Shall We Join a World Organization Which May Require Us to Fight to Enforce Its Decisions?"

Sen. Joseph Ball, Republican from Minnesota, and Wayne Morse, Republican nominee for U. S. senator from Oregon, will argue the affirmative and Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat of Montana, and Joseph Scott, Los Angeles attorney, will debate the negative side.

What will happen to Nazi leaders when the war is won?

The theory that many high officials, instead of fleeing to neutral countries, will surrender themselves with false identification papers and simply disappear will be offered by Arthur Hale on "Confidentially Yours" at 7 p. m. today over WATL.

Postwar Planning

ALBANY, Ga., Sept. 6.—"Postwar Planning" featured a part of the International Association of Fire Chiefs held last week in Cincinnati, Mich., according to Chief D. W. Bronson, Albany's fire department head, who attended.

Miss Bowdre Budd To Head This Season's Debutante Club

By JACQUELINE THIESEN.

When the fourth wartime Debutante Club in Atlanta's social history was organized yesterday, pulchritude was predominant. For the bevy of popular belles assembling for a buffet luncheon at the Piedmont Driving Club, the scene of most of the outstanding social events in the "Gate City of the South," rivaled in beauty a gathering of movie stars or Powers models.

Bowdre Budd, vivacious daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Budd Jr., was chosen to head the debutante ranks this season. Elected to serve with her were Tatty Shipp, vice president, who will continue her education at the University of Georgia; Cortez Colee, who will serve as secretary; and Hollis Rawson, who will be the capable treasurer.

36 MEMBERS LISTED

The all-important question—to bow or not to bow—and if so when, was decided in the affirmative by 36 of the 51 prospective belles, and the date for their joint presentation set tentatively for either December 22, 26, 27 or 29. The exact date will be determined next Sunday afternoon when the new club meets at 3 p. m. at the Driving Club. Following the precedent set two years ago by the second wartime debutante club in Atlanta, the girls will be formally presented to society in a group at an elaborate reception and ball to be held at the Driving Club.

Georgia Plans Works Costing $65,000,000

268 Hospitals Lead In State's Postwar Construction Needs

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 6.—(AP)—Reports compiled by the agricultural and industrial development board indicate that the state of Georgia is planning for postwar construction of 743 projects to cost more than $65 million dollars, Dr. L. V. Howard, executive director, reported today.

Howard said they include airports, hospitals, schools, sanitation facilities, parks and other recreational projects. The largest single group are hospitals and other health facilities, which total 268 at an estimated cost of 30 million dollars.

Parks and other recreational facilities total 233 projects with an estimated cost of over eight million dollars.

The figures do not include local school buildings or other educational facilities, which are supplied at the local level, nor estimates for highway construction which run into the millions.

Georgia has to its credit with the public roads administration more than seven million dollars of unused federal aid funds, the report stated, the third largest amount credited to any state in the union.

Howard said that, although the postwar construction program is not complete because of the absence of figures for cities and counties, enough information has been collected to indicate that Georgia will have, following the war, a tremendous reserve of projects upon some of which construction can start almost immediately.

The public works panel of the board is assisting counties and cities to formulate their own building programs. The Civil Aeronautics Administration, the Federal Works Agency, the state departments of health, highways and education are assisting in this program, which is expected to be completed within the next 12 months. "By that time it is hoped that every county and city in Georgia will have prepared for it a shelf of public works upon which construction can start as soon as funds are available," he said.

Howard asserted that the development board will be tremendously aided if Sen. Walter George's recently proposed amendment to the reconversion bill is adopted by congress. This amendment would make available in Georgia over $5,000,000 in federal funds for future public works needs.

The public works panel has recently completed its surveys in Brantley, Charlton and Camden counties. This report, not yet made public, will be used as a model in planning the public works needs of other areas of the state.

GIRL WITH THE BLONDE MECHE

Slim, Tireless N. Y. Socialite Becomes Legend in Maquis

By KENNETH L. DIXON.

SOUTHERN FRANCE, Aug. 30. (Delayed)—(AP)—In the tiny town of Taronar shortly after dawn on August 15, southern France's D-Day, a parachute sergeant was in a bad fix. He and 15 men had been dropped 10 miles from their assigned landing zone, had fought a quick battle and captured a dozen Germans, but finally were cut off and surrounded. Three wounded needed quick attention. Suddenly the townspeople started shouting. Striding toward a street barricade came a slim, athletic woman, her face deeply tanned, a flashing lock of pure white standing out in her brown, bobbed hair. "The girl with the blonde meche (lock of hair), Fredricka!" exclaimed the French. "It's Miss Pell!" She wore a tricolored brassard of the FFI, but she spoke to the sergeant in pure American. "Okay, kid," she said. "It's all right now."

She stood a moment. Tears rolled down her smiling face, then Isabel Townsend Pell, 43-year-old New Yorker who looks 10 years younger, ended four years in the French underground by showing 16 fellow-Americans how to get safely through the German lines. Those four years included all kinds of mercy work, two arrests by Axis agents and two months in the dread Puget Thénier prison. They were highlighted by her almost legendary organization, and leadership of many Maquis groups on the French Riviera, and climaxed by a fantastic D-Day race to elude the Gestapo.

As long as tales of France are passed on from generation to generation, the story of this American woman will live. Already, everywhere you turn, the French tell you more of the legend. She is best known as "the girl with the blonde meche." Fredricka was her secret underground name. Friends simply call her Miss Pell, their acceptance of the "Mademoiselle" being an indication of their high regard. Today she is serving literally as unofficial "chief of staff" for the American general whose troops are fighting eastward along the Riviera. She is organizing both resistance and rehabilitation work. "She is an amazing woman," the general said. "She keeps going day and night. I send word to her and she gets things done in about a tenth the time it would take anybody else. The French are crazy about her and do anything she tells them." This doesn't surprise Miss Pell, daughter of the late Osgood Pell, socially prominent New York real estate man. She refused to return to her apartment at 414 East 52d street, New York, four years ago because of her faith in the French. "Their faith in Americans," she said, "never faltered during the worst times of Gestapo torture, starvation, freezing conditions in the hills and constant terror. Why shouldn't they do everything we need done to win the war now? The Americans have come and everything is going to be fine."

Isabel Pell had been coming to her summer home in the little village of Auribeau Siagne, halfway between Cannes and Grasse, for many years. When the war broke out she started raising money—which eventually totaled more than 2,000,000 francs—for the French. Much of this was spent in underground activity.

Her constant companion was a Marquise, the daughter of a well-known French family whose brother used to visit the Pells in New York but now fights with the Free French. Miss Pell was not personally active in the actual mechanics of the underground until about a year and a half ago. She had been questioned by the Gestapo, Italian agents and Vichy police many times. Three months before the invasion of Italy 11 Italian agents seized her and searched her home

"But suppose we're stopped on the beaches for a few days!"

New Films at Fox and Paramount; 'Going My Way' Begins 7th Week

"Going My Way" goes into its seventh week of an unprecedented engagement in Atlanta today and other movies which have registered good audience response enter their second week, as only two new photoplays, "Greenwich Village" and "Adventures of Mark Twain," arrive for their first showing.

Paramount

"The Adventures of Mark Twain," Warner Bros.' colorful story of one of America's most beloved authors, with Fredric March in the title role, opens a week's run at the Paramount theater today, as one of two new photoplays offered this week. Alexis Smith is his costar. The story opens on the Mississippi, where Twain began his career as captain of a river boat. It follows him on his travels throughout the country and finally abroad, capturing the color and romance which made his life one of widespread interest. Included in the story are the adventures of Tom Sawyer, the frog jumping incident and his life as a gold prospector in the west.

Roxy

"I Love a Soldier," Paramount's new romantic comedy, which teams Paulette Goddard and Sonny Tufts, today moves to the Roxy theater for a second Atlanta week. Miss Goddard is a USO hostess who kisses all the boys (including a GI from Fort Benning) goodbye. Her meeting with Tufts, a returning war hero, results in matrimony after a whirlwind romance.

Rhodes

"Summer Storm," a story of a beautiful Russian girl (Linda Darnell) and how her love proves the downfall of a well-to-do judge (George Sanders) and a nobleman (Edward Everett Horton) returns to the Rhodes today for its second week in Atlanta.

Capitol

"Going My Way" is re-released, it enters its seventh week at the Capitol theater, an unprecedented run for a regular price engagement in Atlanta.

Quotas Fail In Tin, Paper

Serious shortages of tin and paper are increasing the need for civilian co-operation in the salvage effort, Joseph Voccano, assistant regional salvage director for WPB, has told the Georgia Volunteer War Services Council. Many Georgia counties are failing to meet the national quota of 10 pounds of paper monthly per person and one pound of tin cans (No. 2 cans) monthly per person, Voccano pointed out, at a recent meeting. During July, no tin cans were shipped out of Fulton county, although August statistics may be more encouraging, he said. Fulton county exceeded its paper quota by shipping 13.7 pounds per person during July.

Cobb county failed to fill either its tin or paper quotas, shipping only 5.2 pounds of paper per person in July, with no tin cans shipped. Other counties, including Muscogee, Chatham and Bibb, fell below the paper quota, but Chatham and Bibb exceeded their quotas for tin cans.

Voccano emphasized the importance of salvaged tin cans as America's only present source of tin. He also stated that some of the nation's paper mills have been forced to close because of the shortage of scrap paper. The GVWS council appointed a special committee to name subcommittees in Georgia's 80 largest counties, representing 75 per cent of the state's population, to try to stimulate greater civilian co-operation with the salvage effort. Plans now are being made for continuous collection of tin and paper, rather than sporadic drives, Sullivan said.

Eggs, Butter Worth $8 Cost Six Weeks' Term
Eight dollars worth of eggs and butter will cost Edgar Johnson Fulton six weeks in a federal penitentiary, according to sentence imposed by Judge E. Marvin Underwood in federal court here. Fulton, who pleaded guilty to charges of theft of six pounds of butter and three and three-fourths dozen eggs from Lawson General hospital, was given a two-year probation sentence on his plea entered last month. Yesterday, the probation was revoked and Fulton was given a prison sentence to end October 24.

Bond Purchases
Personnel of all federal agencies except the War, Navy and Post Office Departments in Georgia, Florida, Alabama, South Carolina and Tennessee, purchased 7,914 war bonds at sales price of $749,012, through the pay roll savings plan in August, which is the highest bond issuance for any month since the pay roll savings plan went into effect for federal employees two years ago, according to Clifton A. Wood, regional coordinator of the President's interdepartmental war savings bond committee.

He (Lee Bowman) returns after 18 months to find his bride's feelings toward him have cooled, and he promptly turns to the divorce court. Charles Coburn, in the role of the father, brings about a reconciliation.

Tax-Free Travel Urged for Veterans

A resolution petitioning congress to eliminate all traveling taxes on active and discharged servicemen and women for the duration has been adopted by American Legion Gate City Post No. 72. Copies were mailed to Sens. Walter F. George and Richard B. Russell and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. Referring to the proposed plan of railroads and bus companies to charge servicemen and women the national transportation tax on all tickets, the executive committee of Post No. 72 drew up the resolution, asserting that levying of such tax would cause "hardships as well as other inconveniences to servicemen and women discharged and on furlough."

Most Processed Foods To Be Made Ration-Free

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—(AP)—Virtually all processed foods other than canned fruits will be turned over to prevent non-rationed status in 10 days, the White House announced today, and a War Food Administration spokesman indicated that additional meat also may be made ration-free soon.

War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes directed the removal from rationing on September 7 of these items: All jams, jellies, fruit butters, asparagus, lima beans, corn, peas, pumpkin and squash, mixed vegetables, baked beans, tomato sauce, pasta and puree and all varieties of soups and baby foods.

Byrnes acted on the recommendation of Marvin Jones, WFA administrator, who had advised that available and prospective supplies of these foods justified the step. All other canned vegetables, except tomatoes, are ration-free at present and are expected to continue to be, WFA said in elaborating on the Byrnes announcement.

Among the various types of juices, pineapple, tomato, grape and vegetable combinations remain on the point charts, but indications are that grapefruit and orange juices, blends of these two and grapefruit juice will continue to be available without stamps.

A WFA spokesman said that commercial grade beefsteaks and roasts probably would be removed from rationing in October or November if heavy marketing of cattle develops as anticipated.

He said there was practically no likelihood that the top grades of steak and roasts—"A" and "AA"—will be made ration-free this year. Utility grade beef, the developer said below commercial, is now point-free.

WFA said also there was no prospect that points on canned fruit would be eliminated in the next few months.

A spokesman said release of the additional processed foods from rationing was made possible "by the magnificent production job done by our farmers and the food processors."
